V.

CASE NO. 4:20-CR-288-DPM-1

MUJERA BENJAMIN LUNGAHO

DEFENDANT

ORDER

The United States must turn over to the defense all exculpatory evidence—that is evidence that favors the defendant or casts doubt on the government’s case. See Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963) and cases applying this precedent. If the government fails to produce exculpatory evidence to the defense in a timely manner, the Court may take certain steps: excluding certain evidence; giving adverse jury instructions; dismissing charges; holding government lawyers in contempt; or imposing other appropriate sanctions.

SO ORDERED, this 25th day of February, 2021.
